Pirate-themed English language project in Corrientes scoops British Council 2010 Innovation in English Language Teaching Award.

In the city of Curuzú Cuatiá in the Corrientes Province, you'll find Escuela Nº 435 – a school of 400 pupils and scarce resources. In these conditions, teaching is often a challenge – but this did not deter Patricia Raimondi and Norma Alicia Cornaló from developing an award-winning English language project in the region with the surprising inspiration of Hollywood blockbuster Pirates of the Caribbean. The language project recently won the British Council's 2010 Innovation in ELT Award – a prestigious industry award jointly sponsored by University of Cambridge ESOL Examinations, the British Council, British Airways and IATEFL.

Patricia was invited to attend the IATEFL Conference and to visit Cambridge with all the travel, accommodation and conference fees covered.

Set up in 2006, the programme continues to provide underprivileged 11–14 year olds with a basic knowledge of English through classroom activities inspired by the hit pirate movie.

Summing up the project, Patricia simply says:

“Diversity is about recognising and embracing difference. Attitude is a little thing that makes a big difference.”

The presentation and interviews with Norma and Patricia are now available on the English for Schools video channel
